[New York Sun.]

"This is the third one that has been found in the park lately," said a man at the arsenal, holding out a curious, spiny-looking object for a reporter to look at. "No, it's not a toad, though they call them horned toads. It's a lizard, and the people in the museum call it the phrynosma."

The animal was about four inches loug, and unpleasant to look at. His body was flat, the upper surface being covered with short, dark spines, and the under surface with small plates. The back of its head was armed with several recurving short spines, with shorter spines here and there,
"You wouldn't think that such a creature would know anything," continued the owner of the lizard, "but a snake has to wake up early in the season to get the best of it. I call him Samson, because the first day I had him he pushed under the leg of a heavy chair that was tipped against the wall, and walked up Jefferson avenue and turned fairly knocked it over. If a man were into a clothing store. as strong in proportion to his size, he could lift the obelisk. No, that don't show any cunning, but I'll show you prictor, as he rushed from behind the where the cunning came in. I caught a counter. big striped snake about two weeks ago, I was standing in my yard, when along came a big toad, putting in its best hops, and right behind it the snake, so intent on the chase that it came right up to me. I caught it, and kept it for dollar?" some time in a box with a glass top, and one day it struck me that the spines on a lizard must have been intended as a preventor against snakes. I thought I would test it, so I put Samson into the box. Then I discovered that he was as wise as Solomon. You see the revised Testament business makes a man familiar with Bible names. The snake evidently had not tasted food since last summer-you know they sleep all winter-and quick as a flash he darted at the lizard, but as the boys say, he got left. The little fellow went around the box like a shot, but finally the snake cornered him and caught him by the hind claw. Now, a toad or a frog will squirm around and face a snake and get demoralized generally, and give it a chance to catch hold of the head, but my lizard knew a game worth two of that. When the snake touched him he turned his head directly away. The snake tried every way he could to edge around and get the little fellow by the head, so he went to work to swallow him tail first. He stretched out his jaw and planted his long fangs into the legs and gradually worked the body into his mouth with his smaller teeth. When he had taken in as much as he could in He would sheat your eye-teeth away this way, the long fangs were loosened and flung shead and fresh hold taken, each side of the mouth edging ahead in turn. Nothing could stand this pressure long, and in ten minutes half of the patient lizard was out of sight. He was only waiting for his turn, and it soon out. came; the snake's lips had reached his neck, when operations ceased. There were three or four spines as sharp as needles, pointing out every which way, that put an end to the swallowing business. I didn't see the lizard laugh; he must have felt like it, for he wasn't hurt vhas. I gannot tell you who sold you was much pleased. Our reception was a bit. It took the snake half an hour to dot coat. May be it whas Philip, may as curious as it was cordial. We had to get rid of him, but it tried two or three be Louis, may be my fadder-law. It remove our shoes at the door, and enter times again to swallow him. At every jump the lizard turned his back so that | Chicago. If you leave dot coat I whill the spines faced the snake, and at last I separated them. Yes, it was rather cruel, but I looked at it as a scientific investigation."

The Wheel-Horse.

There is a wheel-horse in every family; some one who takes the load on all occasions. It may be the older daughter, possibly the father, but generally it is the mother. Extra company, sickness, etc., give her a heavy increase of the burden she is always carrying.

Even summer vacations bring less rest and recreation to her than to others of the family. The city house must be put in order, to leave; the clothing for herself and the children which a country sojourn demands, seems never to be finished; and the excursions and picnics which delight the hearts of the young people are not wholly a delight to the provider."

Woman's work is never done. She would never have it done. Ministering to father and mother, cherishing her husband, nourishing and training her children-no true woman wants to see her work done, But because it is never done she needs resting times.

Every night the heavy truck is turned up; the wheel-horse is put up in the stable, and labor and care are dismissed till the morrow. The thills of the household van cannot be turned up at night, and the tired house-mother cannot go into a quiet stall for repose. She goes to sleep to-night feeling the pressure of to-morrow. She must have "an eve" over all until every one is in bed, and must keep an eye ready to open at any moment to answer the need of children, and open both eyes bright and early to see the machine well started for the new day.

There is never any time that seems convenient for the mother of little children to leave home, even for a day; but with a little kindly help from her husband, and a little resolution to herself, she may go and be so much better for it life-time is unravelled. that the benefit will overflow from her into the whole household. She will bring home some new idea and will work with enthusiasm that comes from a fresh start.

One word for the older sister who makes the salad for lunch and the desert for dinner, who takes the position of the wheel-horse quite cheerfully while her young sisters make themselves beautiful and entertaining, and one after another find "one true heart" apiece to love them, and leave the maiden to grow into an old maid. However willing her sacrifice, it was one; and nothing but the devoted love and gratitude of the households whose fires she has helped to kin-dle will reward her for what she has given .- [Christian Union,

The Supreme Court Judges' Gowns.

The cut and style of making the gowns for the Supreme Court Judges are so peculiar that it is not always possible to have them correctly made, and there is a sensational rumor to the effect that Judge Matthews' gown, which was made in Cincinnati, proved to be so unlike the others that it had to be returned for alteration. Justice Miller's wife tells merrily of her trying experience when she wished to have the gown her has- our surroundings.

band now uses made in Paris. In London onv clerical tailor would have understood the kind of gown desired, but not so in Paris; wherefore, after many failures, Mrs, Miller gave instructions to the fashionable modiste who makes her toilets, who was entirely successful in making the gown. The gowns, which are always of the best quality of silk, cost upward of $100. When the Supreme Court was, first organized, the Justices wore quite gaudy gowns. A portrait in oil of the first Chief Justice, John Jay, now hangs in the robing-room opposite the Supreme Court room, in which he is represented as weering a black gown, with a broad, bright-red border around the neck and down the front - Washington (D. Chinese Pirates.

The towns contain a due amount of tame cheats, but the bold, hectoring highwayman, the truculent sea-robber, must be sought elsewhere. All along the Blue and Yellow River are found retail buceaneers, who hawk at a trifling quarry, and fasten on slender profits. These poor rogues do not aspire to a ship of their own; they come paddling out of muddy creeks in the smallest of sampans, ill-armed, ill-clad, but plentifully smeared with fish-oil. If confronted, they fly; if grappled by the crews of the fourth-class junks, which they select as prizes, they slip like so many cels through the hands that grasp them, and their swimming amend for their lax courage. Seldom any very sinister results follow one of these attacks. If the fresh-water pirates prove victorious they are mild conquerors, and only too eager to be on shore again with their booty of rice and corn, stray garments, odd fragments of chain, bits of copper and brass hastily ripped from the poop and cabins, and perhaps the glorious trophy of a few rattling strings of cash. The dollars and silver bars are generally too well hidden to be detected by such hurried searchers; food rather than fortune, is the object of the foray; and, except in rare cases of remarkable temptation, no hie is attempted and no torture resorted to. With these amphibious, petty-larceny rogues the magistrates deal mildly according to the traditions of Chinese justice. Three hundred strokes of the bamboo may be endured by the human frame. Four sleepless weeks in the "cangue," or bamboo pillory, may fail to madden a stolid, unimaginable coolie, A few minor tortues need only be added to these two first named inflictions, and the culprit is said to have been most ten-derly dealt with. Pilferers in a fair, or the streets of a town, are considered as still more venial offenders. A vigorous bastinado and a week of the pillory is the law's reward in such trivial cases. Petty raising is a sin of the deepest dye; and the malicious piercing of a neighbor's dike, to let in a devastating flood, is punished with extreme rigor. Murder and treasonable practices, wholesale piracy, and armed brigandage, all ery aloud for death, more or less slow and painful, and parricide evokes the sternest chastisement of the Chinese, as it once did of the Roman law.

"Well, sir, I suppose you'll go back to school rested by your holiday," said a New Haven father to his "cubblest" boy. An Honesi Restaurant. "Waiter, what is this?"

It was a man sitting at a table digesting that hallucinating dream, that mockery of restaurant mockeries, a modern oyster stew. Calling the white aproned darkey to his side, he pointed down into the dish and said : "Waiter, what is this?"

"I beg yah pawdon, sah?" queried the waiter.

"This thing must be investigated. It appears that you have given me au oyster stew with an oyster in it. Come, this is hardly fair. And I am a stranger,

"Hey?" asked the puzzled waiter. "I repeat, you have given me an oyster stew with an oyster in it. Must I pay anything extra for the oyster?"

"No-why-"Well, that's all right; I'm glad of it," smiled the stranger, straightening up. "Only, I don't see how you can make any money at that rate. You pay a dollar a gallon for oysters and then sell stews at sixty cents. That's barely living profit, whereas if you put an eyster in the stew—well, it beats me how you can afford to do it. I suppose you'll be put-ting chicken in chicken salad, ham in ham sandwiches, and veal in veal pic, next. Then you'll be so rash as to give a man a clean napkin, besides putting vinegar in the vinegar easter when it's run out. You folks will bust up with kindness if you're not careful."— Williamsport Breakfast Table.

People Who Whine.

There is a class of persons in this world, by no means small, whose prominent peculiarity is whining. They whine because they are poor, or if rich because they have so health to enjoy their riches; they whine because they have no luck, and other's prosperity exceeds theirs; they whine because some friends have died and they are living; they whine because they have aches and pains, and they have aches and pains because they whine; they whine, no one can tell why. Now, a word to these whining persons: First, stop whining—it is of no use complaining, fretting, fault-finding and whining. Why, you are the most deluded set of creatures who ever lived! Do you know that it is a well-settled principle of physiology and common sense that these habits are more exhausting to nervous vitality than almost any other violation of physiological law? And do you know that life is pretty much as you make it? You can make it bright and sunshiny, or you can make it dark and shadowy. This life is meant only to discipline us—to fit us for a higher and purer state of being. Then stop whining and fretting, and go on your way rejoicing.

WHAT'S SAVED IS GAINED.

Workingmen will economize by employing Dr. Pierce's medicines. His "Pleasant Purga-tive Pellets" and "Golden Medical Discovery" cleanse the blood and system, thus preventing fevers and other serious diseases, and curing all scrofulous and other humors. Sold by druggists.

A Truly Devoted Wife.

A woman in New Orleans found her husband lying in a state of intoxication in an alley. Instead of being exasperat-ed she gently turned him over to a comfortable position, and, running her hand into his vest pocket, she extracted a $20 bill, and remarked: "I reckon I've gat the deadwood on that new bonnet I've been sufferin' for." She made a straight streak for the millinery store. Strong men wiped the moisture from their eyes at her heroic devotion to a husband who had, by strong drink, brought himself so low as to neglect to provide his wife with the common necessaries of life. - [New Orleans Times,
